Introduction: Towards the end of the twentieth century, English's status as a world language was finally consolidated. Today, the ability to know foreign languages is becoming one of the integral parts of professional education. Since experts in various fields have a high level of cooperation with foreign partners, they have a high demand for language learning. In modern society, foreign languages, especially English, are becoming an important component of professional education. People learn such knowledge first at school, college, lyceum, later in institutes, training courses, or independently by getting acquainted with the basic information sets that help to learn a foreign language.

Today, the interest in learning a foreign language, especially English, is increasing among our youth. In addition, the English language plays an important role in global communication and learning and serves as an important foundation for the future of our youth. In this article, we will consider several methods to make teaching English interesting and effective.

The article talks about some effective and useful ways to increase interest in the English language among our youth. These methods are focused on interactive lessons, game method, English language music, videos and songs, and movies. I will try to expand and fully explain the methods mentioned below.

Increasing interest in the English language is one of the most important tasks. Because, in today's era of globalization, the English language is not only a means of international communication, but also one of the main keys to obtaining knowledge and a lot of necessary information. considering that they have many abilities, it is very effective to teach them the language by using the right methods. In this article, we will consider the main methods to make teaching English more interesting and effective.

The task of the teacher is to create conditions for practical mastery of the language for each student, to choose such teaching methods that allow each student to demonstrate his activity and creativity, and in the process of teaching foreign languages, the student's is to activate cognitive activity. Modern pedagogical technologies, such as cooperative learning, project methodology, use of new information technologies, Internet resources, help to implement a person-oriented approach in the educational process, individualization of education, taking into account the abilities of children and their level of learning, provides differentiation. Forms of working with computer training programs in foreign language classes include: 1. Learning vocabulary; 2. Practicing pronunciation; 3. Teaching dialogic and monologic speech; 4. Teaching writing; 5. Development of grammatical events.

Interactive method: One of the main requirements for teaching foreign languages using Internet resources is to create interaction in the lesson, which is usually called "interactivity" in the method. Interactivity is "combination, coordination and completion of communicative goals and resulting efforts by means of speech." By teaching the real language, the Internet helps to build speaking abilities and skills, and also ensures genuine interest and therefore efficiency in teaching vocabulary and grammar. Interactivity not only creates real situations from life, but also forces students to respond appropriately to them in a foreign language.

Game method: If lessons are not taught with unique methods and interesting methods, it can become a difficult task to attract students to the lesson. If traditional methods are used in lessons and they are conducted in an interesting way, this not only ensures the quality of the lesson, but also prevents boredom and attracts passive students to active participation in the lesson.

For example, "Rolli games" can be used to improve the effectiveness of English lessons. The advantage of this game is that it is played based on the situation. This game is not only useful for language learning, but also helps to develop mental abilities. In this game, topics are selected and children create a dialogue. For example, the process of a buyer buying clothes is two friends quarreling - all this is shown and spoken in English. It is in this game that we can use the tactics of working with a team, that is, dividing students into groups and dividing them into different topics. In this case, competition also arises. Healthy competition is a criterion for growth. Of course, when the game is over, it is necessary to encourage the winning group. I will cite another game as an example, this game is called "Find the surplus game". That is, 20 fruits and vegetables have English names, 15 are fruits, and 5 are vegetables. Children will have to separate them. They will be given 5 minutes, the winning group will be awarded.

Teaching English with the help of music, videos, films and movies: When we watch movies, cartoons or series, listening to the conversations of real English people will definitely improve our listening skills. In addition, we come across new words, idioms, phrases. By memorizing them, our vocabulary will increase and we will know which sentences should be used in which situations. By using these words and sentences in life, your speaking will grow. So, we can teach Listening, Vocabulary, Speaking and partly grammar at the same time. For example, telling children to watch a movie suitable for their age, not just watching it, but also aiming to learn the language by watching that movie as much as possible, and it will be more effective if you write down new words and phrases.

To sum up, modern language teaching is aimed at forming a more cultured person, and it is appropriate to deliver new knowledge to children through systematic and innovative methods. To teach children a foreign language is to form their personal development based on modern methods with age-appropriate creative and didactic games and open activities. It is effective to teach a foreign language (English) through an interactive method, game methods and watching music, videos, films and movies. With the help of these methods, it will be easy to teach English to young people of different temperaments and attract their attention.

Conclusion

In conclusion, effectively teaching foreign languages, such as English, to young learners requires a multifaceted approach that embraces their natural curiosity and developmental needs. By employing interactive and engaging methods—such as games, storytelling, songs, and technology—educators can create a stimulating learning environment that fosters language acquisition. Additionally, incorporating cultural elements and real-life contexts enhances relevance and encourages students to connect with the language on a personal level.

Furthermore, recognizing the importance of differentiation in instruction allows teachers to cater to diverse learning styles and paces among young learners. Continuous assessment and positive reinforcement are essential in motivating students and building their confidence in using the new language.

Ultimately, the goal is not just to teach English as a subject but to inspire a lifelong love for language learning. With patience, creativity, and an understanding of young learners' unique characteristics, educators can lay a strong foundation for their future linguistic capabilities while nurturing their overall cognitive development. As we look toward the future of language education, it is crucial to adapt our methods continually in response to evolving pedagogical insights and technological advancements.
